SECTION A: COMPREHENSIONQUESTION 1

Read BOTH TEXT A and TEXT B and answer the set questions.

TEXT ABABY FAT

Childhood obesity has been described as one of the most serious public health challenges of the 21st century.

- | | | |
|---|--|----------|
| 1 | 'It is just puppy fat – she will grow out of it.' 'Children need to eat as much as possible to grow.' 'The extra kilos only mean he has a healthy appetite.' These common misunderstandings about children who are overweight or obese just do not hold true anymore. In fact, the World Health Organisation, which monitors health matters worldwide, describes childhood obesity as one of the most serious public health challenges of the 21 st century. | 5 |
| 2 | Globally, in 2007, an estimated 22 million children under the age of five years were overweight. In South Africa, 17% of children between one and nine years are overweight. For these children, the risk of becoming overweight adults and catching various illnesses increases in a big way. In addition, overweight or obese children may struggle with emotional issues like discrimination and poor self-image, even when they are adults. | 10 |
| 3 | In some cases, what children inherit from their parents can be blamed for weight gain. However, lifestyle issues most often play a role in children becoming overweight, especially in recent times. According to the World Health Organisation, one of the main reasons for childhood obesity is the steady global shift in diet towards energy-dense foods which are high in fat and sugar but low in nutrients. | 15 |
| 4 | Another reason for weight gain is decreased physical activity levels. The World Health Organisation mentions that this is the result of 'the inactive nature of many forms of entertainment, changing forms of transport, and increasing urbanisation'. In South Africa, safety concerns can be added to this list. Fearing for their children's safety, parents may refuse to let them ride their bicycles or walk to school. | 20 |
| 5 | Parents need to manage their children's weight: while inherited causes need to be managed medically, lifestyle factors can be changed or improved. 'The sooner you start, the better,' says Brad Bing, the driving force behind Sporting Chance which is a youth sports development agency. He says, 'Research shows that children begin their lifestyle patterns by the age of 12. Therefore, it is important that children eat healthily and lead an active lifestyle as early as possible in order to adopt these practices later in life.' | 25

6	'Parents need to set a good example by eating the same healthy dishes as their children and also sharing mealtimes with them. They should aim to encourage healthy eating patterns and build a "healthful" relationship with food in their children,' says Celeste Naudé, a registered dietician. 'Research has shown that starting with healthier eating habits could provide life-long benefits.'	35
7	Greasy fast food, unhealthy pre-packaged meals and sugar-laden tuck-shop treats have become a habit with most children. These eating habits contribute to children becoming overweight. 'Childhood is an intensive growth and development phase. That's why children need more nutritious food. To provide all the essential nutrients, a child's meals and snacks should include a wide variety of foods from each group, in amounts suited to the child's nutritional needs and appetite,' advises Celeste. We live in a society where everything needs to be bigger and better, and that also applies to our meals. Celeste says meal serving sizes should increase with age. However, it is important that children are guided and taught about suitable meal portion sizes early.	40 45
8	The World Health Organisation suggests that parents make physical activity part of the family's daily routine. Parents should make time for family walks or playing active games together. In addition to increasing their physical activity, children should decrease the amount of time they spend on inactive activities like playing computer games and watching television. 'Children should be encouraged to participate in an organised sport that they may enjoy. Not only will they become physically active, but also gain confidence and essential life skills.'	50 55
9	The approach to weight problems in children is important and should be done in a way that the child is not made to feel victimised or different. When it comes to children and obesity, it helps to remember that every action taken to prevent weight gain will pay off in the long run.

SECTION B: SUMMARYQUESTION 2

You are preparing a speech on how to improve your self-image.

Read the passage (TEXT C) below and write down the SEVEN main points you will include in your speech.

INSTRUCTIONS

1. List SEVEN points in full sentences, using NO MORE THAN 70 words.
2. Number your sentences from 1 to 7.
3. Write only ONE point per sentence.
4. Use your OWN words.
5. Indicate the total number of words you have used in brackets at the end of your summary.

TEXT CWAYS TO IMPROVE YOUR SELF-IMAGE

The more negative feedback we receive from others, the more likely we are to develop low self-esteem. So, pampering yourself occasionally with a day at a health resort, a special meal or a bunch of flowers is not selfish or indulgent. It means you care about and value yourself. Instead of surrounding yourself with people who are quick to criticise and judge you, spend time with family members, colleagues and friends who uplift you and make you feel good about yourself.

Make a list of all your positive qualities and everything you have achieved in your life, no matter how small. Perhaps you are a fantastic cook or a good listener. Refer to your list often and remind yourself how much you have to offer. If there is something you really do not like about yourself (such as your quick temper or poor eating habits), commit to making change happen. Take it one step at a time and congratulate yourself on every success.

Allow yourself sometimes to say 'no' to tasks given or favours asked. Remind yourself that your needs are also important. Instead of aiming for something unrealistic (like finding a cure for cancer), and feeling miserable when you fail, rather concentrate on something simple and practical (like planting a small vegetable garden). The more 'small' goals you achieve, the better you will feel about yourself and your abilities. This, in turn, will give you more self-confidence to deal with bigger goals.

Eating healthily, sleeping well and exercising are all important in living life to the fullest. Before you go to bed, think of one pleasing event that happened in your day. Be thankful and look forward to the next uplifting moment.

Read the following passage (TEXT F), which contains some deliberate errors, and answer the set questions.

TEXT FSPELLING LESSONS

A young man and his parents teach a doctor the true meaning of courage.

- | | | |
|---|---|----|
| 1 | The wheelchair-bound young man, a patient of me, was pushed to the stage of the high school to deliver his graduation speech. His face were still partially paralysed and he spoke in a soft voice. But Mark Orsini delivered a powerful speech and was applauded by his fellow pupils. | |
| 2 | The 18-year-old had developed an illness causing paralysis. His parents insisted that he was a fighter; he would get through this and go onto attend university. Meanwhile, immobile and unable to breathe, how was he going to ask questions or be involved in taking care of himself? | 5 |
| 3 | The solution was remarkable: the Orsinis would sit at Mark's side and recite the alphabet. When they got to a letter Mark needed to spell a word, he'd nod 'yes'. They would write it down, then start over and wait for him to nod again. They never lost patients, and Mark was involved in every decision. | 10 |
| 4 | After a risky (proceed) to filter his blood, he showed (improve) and soon he could move his legs and arms again. | |
| 5 | I saw Mark again after his graduation. Mark was feeling great. I wanted to say I was in awe of him, and that his parents were the ... amazing people I had ever met. Sitting beside his bed for hours, patiently listening to him spell words, could not have been easy. | 15 |
| 6 | I wanted to say: 'I will never forget you or your parents and the sacrifices you have made.' But words failed me. | 20 |
