Focus: Public sector - Municipalities and their role in local communities

The Constitution of the Republic of South Africa 1996 recognises national, provincial and local government as three spheres of government that are distinctive, interdependent and interrelated.

The constitution recognises the local sphere of government as consisting of municipalities that must be established for the whole territory of the Republic. Municipalities are then under the executive and legislative authority of a municipal council, which is elected for a five-year term. Further, municipalities have the right to govern, on their own initiative, the local government affairs of their communities without impediment or compromise by national and provincial government. However, in terms of section 139 of the constitution, the provincial executive may intervene when a municipality cannot or does not fulfil an executive obligation in terms of the constitution or legislation.
